Experts Discuss How to Find – and Keep – Teachers of Color

There's a national shortage of teachers of color, and it has as much or more to do with retention than recruitment. Teachers of color leave the profession at a higher rate than white teachers, with most reporting dissatisfaction with working conditions as the main reason. "We need to fix and change the way schools are run and organized," Richard Ingersoll, a University of Pennsylvania professor and expert on teacher workplace issues, said at panel discussion at the 2017 Education Writers Association National Seminar on June 1.
